Services Slated Tomorrow For Ernest V. Hollis, Jr.

Funeral services for Ernest V. Hollis, Jr., a research analyst for the Central Intelligence Agency who shot himself yesterday, will be at 9 a.m. tomorrow at Fort Myer Chapel.

Mr. Hollis, 38, died in Washington Hospital Center of a bullet wound in the head. The District coroner, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, issued a certificate of suicide.

Mr. Hollis and his wife, Louise, also employed as an analyst by CIA, lived at 1725 New Hampshire avenue N.W.

His father, Dr. Ernest V. Hollis, sr., is chief of college administration of the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

Born in Statesboro, Ga., Mr. Hollis attended public schools in Georgia and the Horace Mann School of Columbia University. He was an all-around athlete and honor student.

He was a Phi Beta Kappa from Wesleyan University where he majored in government and public administration. He later completed his master's degree at Columbia University, where he was a candidate for a Ph.D. degree.

After graduation, in the early 40s Mr. Hollis worked for the Office of Price Administration and soon afterward accepted a commission in the Navy, where he served as an intelligence officer.

Upon his discharge after 3½ years of service, Mr. Hollis worked for the State Department and later began writing his dissertation on the Russian secret police for his doctor's degree.

ERNEST V. HOLLIS

He joined CIA in 1955, and met his wife there.

Also surviving is his mother of 2366 Quincy street, Arlington, Va.
